2013

Telfair County is located in south central Georgia, 154 miles southeast of Atlanta and 70 miles south of Macon.

Telfair County has four beautiful seasons, with an average year-round temperature of 65 °F. Winters are mild with an average high of 55°F, while summers are warm with an average high of 93°F and low of 75°F. Spring and autumn are transitional with temperatures leaning to the warm side.

Telfair enjoys mild temperatures year-round due to the proximity to the warm water of the Gulf of Mexico. Rainfall averages 50 inches annually, providing lush foliage.

Telfair's relatively mild climate throughout the year affords unlimited opportunities for recreation. Telfair's creeks and rivers provide bountiful fishing and water activities. Hunters delight in the dove, quail, wild turkey, duck, deer and small game that abound in the area.

The county and state rural roads deliver a panoramic view of the countryside for those exploring on bicycle or motorcycles. Beautiful scenic drivers offer rolling hills, timbered land and open farmland. In the summer the sweet fragrance of honeysuckle adds to a delightful evening ride.

As with many small towns, church activities are an important way of life. Most denominations are represented in the county.

Quality of Life is a feeling inherent to life in Telfair. Feelings of quality educational opportunities for our children, quality of social life for everyone, quality of workforce and workplace, quality of enjoying living with a sense of warmth and belonging...these are but a glimpse of what qualities shine forth in Telfair.

Telfair County prides itself in providing all the things that anyone could dream of with its wealth of vast and various resources. The county is approximately 440 square miles with flowing rivers bordering over half the boundary. A pleasant mixture of gently rolling hills dotted with our number one natural product.. pine trees.. and accented with creeks and swampland presents a livable rural setting which offers hunting and fishing.

The population is around 16,500, spreading over six cities and several unincorporated communities. The county seat is McRae, which has a population around 5,700.

The county is poised for planned growth with most cities having upgraded their infrastructure to accommodate the planned expansion.

Quality of Education in Telfair has leaped light-years into the future in recent years. The system averages 1700 students and has earned numerous awards. Computer literacy is offered from kindergarten through high school, and high technology labs are used in grades 6-12. The system offers strong academics at all levels as well as strong athletic programs with feeder programs starting in middle school grades.

Telfair County is fortunate to have top-quality teachers, staff, and administrators who care and work hard to create an environment that is safe, welcoming, and academically rigorous for all students.

Quality of Cultural Activities is prevalent in Telfair. Telfair has over 100 churches, some having originated in the mid-1800s. The Old South Georgia College, as it is affectionately dubbed, is a cultural center that is tended by the Telfair Historical Society. Plays and other special events are regular attractions at the restored college. Many civic clubs have charters in the county. Parades, festivals and other outdoor events are planned annually.

Jacksonville, GA

Jacksonville was the first seat of government and was named for General Andrew Jackson. Between 1807 and 1812, court was held in various homes. In 1812 a courthouse was erected on the site of the present Methodist Church.

In 1870 McRae became the county seat.

Jacksonville was an important point on the Blackshear Trail which followed the Altamaha and Ocmulgee Rivers from Darien to Fort Hawkins.

The center of a large and wealthy plantation economy, Jacksonville was a landing for freight and passenger traffic on the river before and some years after the War between the States.

● 1.1 square miles land

● Population: 140

Lumber City, GA

Lumber City was incorporated in Bill No 255 of the Acts of the General Assembly (90th Session) and approved on September 3, 1889.

Lumber City became a thriving town due to the tremendous amount of lumber and other products that were shipped by steamboats to Brunswick and Darien, GA in the late 1800's. Steamboats on the Ocmulgee River made connections with the Southern Railroad at Lumber City. This was an excellent source of transportation for the area.

Lumber City was once known as the "Artesian City" due to the numerous artesian wells.

- 1.9 square miles land
- Population: 1,328
- Train Trestle once turned to allow steamboats to pass along the Ocmulgee River.

Historic Trails

■ Historical Homes Walking Tour of McRae

This tour of homes is an easy, self-guided tour of more than 30 of McRae's homes and churches of the New South era. A map of the area can be downloaded with the relevant sites indicated from <http://www.telfairco.org/attractionsevents/fests/historicaltrails.html>.

The Old South Georgia Colleges, which is on the National Historic Register, makes a convenient tour starting point. Each home is numerically indicated on the annotated map.

■ Telfair Trails

This tour is a driving tour through Telfair County highlighting historic sites and structures of the county.

A printed tour guide book can be obtained from the Pioneer Arts & Historical Society at (229) 868-7114.

McRae, GA

McRae was incorporated March 3, 1874 and is the county seat. McRae was named after Daniel Murphy McRae, a Scottishman, who is known for aiding in Telfair's county seat being moved from Jacksonville to McRae.

McRae is also known as the Crossroad City due to the fact that four major highways cross in McRae:
US 341/441/280/319

- 3.4 square miles land
- Population: 5,740
- Replica of the Statue of Liberty – one twelfth of the size of the original

Milan, GA

With the coming of Seaboard Railroad in the early 1800's, came the beginnings of the City of Milan. The depot was constructed in 1899. The Depot was named the Milan Depot by the wife of an executive of the railroad after she returned from a visit to Europe.

Railroad transportation made it easy for farmers to ship their products to seaport cities. There was, at one time, three cotton gins, three sawmills and two turpentine stills in Milan.

Part of the City of Milan is located in Telfair County and part in Dodge County.

Milan is a serene and peaceful community surrounded by rich farmlands.

■ Liberty Square

Located at the intersection of Hwy 341 and Hwy 441 in downtown McRae, is Liberty Square, home of a Statue of Liberty replica that is 35 feet tall and one-twelfth the original's actual size. She is constructed of a stump from a nearby swamp, Styrofoam and an electrician lineman's glove.

Also in Liberty Square is a version of the Liberty Bell and a marble memorial to Telfair County residents who died in service.

Scotland, GA

Scotland was originally called McVile after the Civil War and was populated mostly by Scotch Presbyterians. The town of McVile, chartered September 23, 1881, was settled on land owned by Barnabus Livingston. The town of Scotland was chartered on August 19, 1911.

Gum Swamp, or as some know it-Little Ocmulgee River, follows the outer edge of Scotland where, at one time, thousands of logs were rafted down it to Darien, GA.

For a long number of years, Scotland was the chief cotton market of this territory.

Telfair County Public School System

The Telfair County School System is pursuing excellence by establishing a global learning environment for student success. The system's commitment to excellence is evident in its strong implementation of the Georgia Performance Standards (GPS), assessment for learning, frequent progress monitoring, focus on differentiated instruction and implementation of Response to Intervention (RTI) to provide maximum opportunities for student success both behaviorally and academically. Throughout the Telfair County School System, a continuum of programs and resources are in place to meet the needs of all students.

The goal of Telfair County Pre-K is to provide activities that help children develop healthy bodies and learn skills and concepts appropriate for their age that are necessary for maximum growth. It is also the school's goal to prepare parents and students for smooth transition into kindergarten, and to see each Pre-K student graduate from high school and college in the future.

Telfair County Elementary School is committed to the continuous improvement of instruction and achievement. Students in grades K – 2 participate in the SRA Reading Mastery Program. This is a research-based reading program that explicitly teaches the thinking processes needed for decoding and comprehension. Teachers and students have access to a variety of technological resources, such as Academy of Math, Academy of Reading, ALS, Classworks, and Study Island. Telfair County Elementary School also offers students the opportunity to demonstrate their talents through activities such as band, chorus, science fair, and spelling bees.

Telfair County Middle School provides students with standards-based, assessment-driven curriculum to help them become global learners. TCMS has made significant gains on standardized test scores for the overall student population, and the school continues to strive to meet the academic needs of all students. In addition to a strong academic program, Telfair County Middle Schools offers students the opportunity to participate in various extracurricular activities, including Junior Beta Club, Reading Club, Student Council, 4-H, FCA, chorus, band, basketball, softball, football, tennis, baseball, wrestling, golf, and cheerleading.

■ Telfair Center for the Arts

The Telfair Center for the Arts is operated and maintained by the Pioneer Historical Society of Telfair County.

The Center is the rehabilitated South Georgia College Administration Building, the county's landmark building that was constructed in 1892 under the auspices of the South Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church. It provided grades 1 through 11 and three years of college. It was transferred to the local school system in 1928 and served as the local high school, then elementary school until sold to the Telfair Art Association and Pioneer Historical Society (jointly the Pioneer Historical Society) in 1979. The South Georgia College Administration Building was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1982.

The mission of the Society is the preservation of Telfair history and to generate interest in the arts among the regions citizens. To this end, an extensive restoration and rehabilitation of the Administration Building was undertaken in 2002. Today, the resultant Center features restored lobby and auditorium, dressing rooms, public restrooms, and one reception room. The auditorium, noted for its wonderful acoustical qualities, seats 410 and its stage is 20 X 42. The Center is air conditioned and adequate parking is available. The first event in the new Center was held in March, 2010.

■ Little Ocmulgee State Park

Little Ocmulgee State Park is located at 80 Live Oak Trail, Helena, GA and is surrounded by 1,277 acres of southern piedmont forest.

There is a 60 room lodge, 10 cottages, meeting facilities and the Fairway Grill Restaurant. The campground has 54 tent, trailer, and RV sites.

The Park offers a wide variety of activities:

- Wallace Adams Golf Course
- Volley Ball
- Biking
- Walking Trails
- Splash Pad
- Beach
- Fishing
- Boating

Telfair County High School is committed to academic excellence. The administration and staff are also committed to preparing each student for success in college, career, and life through a challenging curriculum in a student-centered environment. Teachers and students have access to a Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math (STEM) lab so that they may participate in virtual experiments and collaborate with other students and schools. Beginning in the 2012 school year, TCHS now offers an Honors Curriculum understanding that they will have to meet higher standards of performance. In addition, a Great Books program has been added to the curriculum. Qualifying students have the opportunity to enroll in the Honors Program.

Recent awards: GHSA Class-A Sportsmanship Award and “No Excuses” Award from Georgia Public Policy.

SAT results for 2011 showed TCHS was fifth out of thirteen area schools.
